PHI 110

Ethics

Course Description
This course is a study of the moral principles of conduct emphasizing ethical problems and modes of ethical reasoning.

Prerequisite or Co requisite: ENG 101

3.0 Cr (3 lect/pres, 0 lab, 0 other)

Course Focus
Ethics is the subject that studies the fundamental nature of “the good”, of values, justice, and related concepts. In this sense it is a deep and complex subject. This does not mean it is closed off to those of us who see ourselves as living ordinary lives, however. Deep questions are often of crucial importance to our lives and provide us with meaning. We will approach this course by following the historical progression of Ethics, while also looking at how these perennial questions relate to our lives in the 21 century. Readings will be taken from both primary and secondary sources. This course requires the student to be active, engaged, open-minded, willing to participate both enthusiastically and respectfully in online discussion.

PHI 110 CORE CURRICULUM COMPETENCIES

All courses approved for the general education core curriculum help students develop critical thinking and/or communication skills.

This course develops critical thinking skills for students through weekly short answer essays, which require students to evaluate ethical theories and consider how these ideas connect with their personal convictions and social backgrounds. Students are provided with extra reading materials on the topic and are encouraged to seek out other material to support their arguments.

This course develops written communication skills through their weekly short answer essays as well as through their participation in class discussions, which enable them to further assess the moral questions under consideration and how these questions redound on their practical lives.
