12 Glossary

% Chg	Percentage change represents the degree of change over the time period shown. AY	Academic Year
Academic Degree	An award conferred by a college, university, or other postsecondary education institution as official recognition for the successful completion of a program of studies. There are four main categories of academic degrees: Associate, Baccalaureate, Master, and Doctorate. Other academic degrees can include certificates and diplomas.
Academic Year	For the purposes of this report, applicant academic year is defined as the period beginning August 1 and ending July 30. Enrollment academic year is comprised of the Fall, Spring and Summer report terms.
Applicant	An individual who has applied for admission to the college.
Associate Degree	An undergraduate academic degree granted after completion of two years of study. Community colleges and career colleges generally award associate degrees.
Award	See Academic Degree.
Calendar Year	Twelve-month period starting with January 1 and ending with December 31, and which has 365 days in non-leap years and 366 days in a leap year. Also called civil year.
Career Development	A program in which non-degree seeking undergraduates are enrolled. Dual Enrolled or Early College Credit Opportunity students are enrolled in Career Development.
Certificate	A formal award certifying the satisfactory completion of a postsecondary education program. Certificates can be awarded at any level of postsecondary education and include awards below the associate degree level.
Civilian Labor Force	The civilian labor force is a term used by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to refer to Americans whom it considers either employed or unemployed; military personnel, federal government employees, retirees, handicapped or discouraged workers, and agricultural workers are not part of the civilian labor force.

The civilian labor force is made up of two components. The first is civilian workers, a category that includes all private sector, state and local government workers. Workers are defined as people who are 16 years old or older and did at least one hour of paid work (or unpaid work in their own business). Active-duty military personnel, institutionalized individuals, agricultural workers and federal government employees are excluded.

The second component of the labor force is unemployed people who are available work. People who would like to work but have given up due to lack of opportunities, an injury or illness are outside the labor force.

College	A postsecondary school that offers general or liberal arts education, usually leading to an associate's, bachelors, masters, or doctor's degree. Community colleges are included under this terminology.
Community College	A public postsecondary institution in which the highest degree awarded is a two-year or associate degree. Community colleges are sometimes referred to as junior colleges, technical colleges or city colleges.
Degree	See Academic Degree.
Degree Student	A college or university student intending to take an academic degree upon successful completion of a course of study in higher education.
Degree-seeking Student	A student seeking an associate degree, certificated or diploma while attending the College. Dual Enrolled and transient students are not considered degree-seeking. See Degree Student.
Developmental Education Course	A course with a course number smaller than 100 in English, mathematics, or reading curriculum.
Developmental Education Student	A student who attempted at least one developmental education course during a semester. Developmental education courses have a course number of 032 or 012 in English, mathematics, or reading.

The College Persistence Rate is based on tracking all TCL credit students less Dual Enrolled students from fall enrollment to the successive Spring term. The Division Persistence Rate is based on tracking fall students in their initial Division to the same division in the successive Spring term. The Department Persistence Rate is based on tracking fall students in their initial department to the same department in the successive Spring term.
